On March 25, 1972 from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. the Ecology Center will sponsor a Green Elephant Sale at St. Andrew's Church. Our emphasis will be on making craft items from recycled materials. We hope to show people that recycled items should be seen in a new light; Instead of "Throw away this junk" we hope to begin to get people thinking along the lines of "What can I do with this?"

We will have many unique articles for sale, there will be demonstrations and instructions on how to make the items, there will be free babysitting with projects for the older children to do, and there will be samples of organic foods, in addition to an organic lunch.

This will be a great opportunity for teachers, scout leaders, and craft groups to discover new art projects, for "do-it-yourselfers" to find new ideas, or for anyone who is all thumbs to buy already made items.

We will have something for everyone: games that children can make for themselves, or presents they can make for friends or parents; projects for men (such as making glasses and candlesticks from bottles, and making wine racks from sewer pipes), and of course jewelry, decorating items, and many more ideas.

Here is an opportunity to gain many ideas and have an enjoyable day.

If anyone has crafts they can demonstrate or materials they would like to sell, please contact Jill Hair (home phone: 434-3378; work: 663-3351). The art teachers in each school have been contacted and children may make articles to show or sell from recycled materials.
