

ARE YOU CONCERNED ABOUT CLEAN AIR, SOIL AND WATER IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD?

National studies show that most pollution is found in African-American or low-income communities.

The NAACP and the Ecology Center have joined to address environmental concerns in the Ypsilanti area, and will hold a series of community meetings to discuss these issues. If you are concerned about clean air, soil or water in your neighborhood, please plan on attending this first meeting to share your concerns:

7 p.m., Tuesday, February 28, 1995
Perry Child Development Center
550 Perry St., Ypsilanti

The Ecology Center and the NAACP don't think you should compromise your health or your quality of life for someone else's pollution. It's time to find solutions to pollution!

For more information about this meeting or the Ypsilanti Pollution Prevention Project, please call Jennifer Jamison Lofton, NAACP, at 480-9654 or Stacey Fallis, Ecology Center, at 761-3186.
